1.	On 16 October 1953, the Flak Kaserne in Leipzig-Schoenau quartered about 200 men who wore red-bordered black epaulets with artillery and motor transport insignia. About 4 p.m. on 8 October, about 60 men carrying baggage and small arms left the installation toward the railros station where they boarded three boxcars. On 16 October, soldiers were seen being trained with machine guns in the training area south of the installation, while an estimated 50 to 60 men were practicing the construction of field fortifications. On the same day, 50 to 60 men fallen in in front of one of the quartering buildings and three or four squads doing close order drill. The doors of the motor vehicle garages were closed.	2
